The Structure of the SCA

Introduction

The structure of the SCA is sometimes difficult to understand completely. This is because the organization operates on several levels. On one level, we're a modern nonprofit corporation. On another level, we're a club, run by the officers and the membership. On still another level, we're a feudal monarchy. Figuring out which level of organization is applicable in a given situation is one of the challenges of getting things done, and not something at which a beginner can expect to be proficient.

How this relates to you: As a seneschal you are always working as an officer of a local club, much like any other civic organization. You are the legal representative of your local group to the general public.

Board of Directors

At the top of the heap, the SCA is governed by a seven-member Board of Directors. This Board is self-perpetuating, meaning that it chooses its own members. Anyone in the organization can nominate someone for a seat on the Board of Directors. Candidates can also self-nominate, which is quite common. The Board seeks input from the membership on the qualifications of candidates, but there is no direct election or input. For the Board to act it must act as a whole; an individual Board member has no particular authority. Board decisions are made by a majority vote—the only place in the SCA where decisions are made this way.

How this relates to you: From time to time, the Board will request comments from the membership on a particular topic or course of action. If you have an opinion at all about the subject, write to the Board and tell them what you think. Encourage your local members to do the same; the Board is happy to get feedback from anyone in the organization.

Society Officers

There are also Society-level officers to correspond to the kingdom-level officers. There is a Society Seneschal, a Society Marshal, and so forth. A couple of these are paid, part-time positions, but most are volunteer positions.

How this relates to you: Generally, you will not have much interaction with Society Officers; however, it is important to know who they are should you have to work your way up a particular chain of command.

Society Seneschal

The Society Seneschal has the authority to make policy decisions and to interpret the SCA's governing documents, although his/her rulings are subject to approval by the Board of Directors, and must be reported to the Board at their next meeting. The other officers may make decisions and rulings in their particular areas of authority. Again, these decisions are subject to the Board's approval.

How this relates to you: Most of your interaction with the Society Seneschal will be through the Kingdom Seneschal. You should not contact the Society Seneschal about problems within your group or kingdom unless you have exhausted all courses of action within the Kingdom.

Kingdom Seneschal

The Kingdom Seneschal is the legal representative for the Kingdom of Meridies in the eyes of the modern world. The Kingdom Seneschal interprets Kingdom Law, and makes policy decisions about the day-to-day workings of the Kingdom. These decisions are subject to approval by the Crown and the Society Seneschal. Other kingdom officers have similar authority within their particular areas of expertise. There are several deputies who serve under the Kingdom Seneschal, one of which will be your reporting deputy.

How this relates to you: The same is true of those charged with running the Kingdom as it is for the Board of Directors. If the Kingdom Seneschal, or your Reporting deputy, asks you for input, please try to give it. Don't worry if you think your idea might not be the preferred one. Sometimes, they're looking for why an idea might not work. The Kingdom Seneschal or your regional reporting deputy is your "go-to" person when you need one.

The Crown

The Crown (the King and Queen) are absolutely in charge of the medieval aspects of the SCA. They have the sole power to give awards and to change Kingdom Law (although Kingdom Law cannot be changed in such a way as to conflict with the Society's governing documents, or real-world law). The Crown also appoints Kingdom Great Officers, in conjunction with the appropriate Society Officer. The Kingdom Great Officers are defined in Kingdom Law, but currently consist of the Kingdom Seneschal, Earl Marshal, Beacon Herald, Minister of Arts and Sciences, Chronicler, Exchequer, Chatelaine, and Webminister. A great many other things are subject to the Crown's approval. For example, both the Crown and the appropriate Kingdom Officer sign the warrant rosters for local officers, and the Crown must be consulted if a warrant is to be revoked.

How this relates to you: As an officer of your group, you have a duty to submit award recommendations the Crown. When there are people in your group doing things for which you believe they deserve recognition, you should submit an award recommendation. The Crown can't know all Their subjects and They really want to hear from you.

Branch Seneschal

Introduction

A local seneschal has many duties, some general duties like those that come with most offices and some very specific duties that come solely with the seneschal's office. These are outlined below and are certainly not all inclusive.

Check with your kingdom seneschal or reporting deputy if you have any question about how to go about completing these duties. The seneschal will also frequently find him/herself the person who handles all of those tasks and responsibilities that don't neatly fit into the job descriptions of any of the other officers or deputies. While this does not necessarily mean that you have to handle them yourself, you will have to make sure that someone does take care of them.

General Duties

The local branch seneschal within the SCA is directly responsible for:

- Acting as the legal representative for the branch.
- Running or arranging for the running of group activities in a manner that meets the needs of the populace and the SCA.
- Assuring that the branch complies with real-world law, Corpora, and Meridian Kingdom Law, either by reference to the SCA documents or consultation with the Kingdom Seneschal.
- Submitting the required office reports on a timely basis.
- Monitoring receipt of copies of the reports that are to be sent by the other local officers to their kingdom superiors in order to be aware of whether the responsibilities of their offices are being fulfilled.
- Participating in financial decisions as a member of the branch's Financial Committee.
- Overseeing conflict and dispute resolution when the issue can be resolved at the local level.
- Are required to join the Meridies Seneschal Yahoo group or other methods of bulk communication required by the Kingdom Seneschal.
- Fulfilling the duties of any vacant offices, including submitting their reports as required.

Legal Representative

You, as the warranted seneschal, are the only person authorized by SCA, Inc. to act as legal representative for the branch, or in other words, to obligate the Society at the local level. This includes the following responsibilities.

- Contracts: Only the seneschal can sign site contracts or any other contract at the local level.
- SCA Sanction: Only the ranking seneschal at an event can decide whether to pull SCA sanction from an event if things get out of hand. Notification of such an action must be made as soon as possible to the ranking seneschal's superior. (This is covered in Corpora and requires extreme circumstances.)
- Non-SCA Paperwork: This includes doing any paperwork required to maintain any standing your branch has outside the SCA (for example, paperwork required to reserve a meeting room or to maintain student group status at the local college). You don't necessarily have to do this yourself, but it's your job to see that it gets done, and on time.

Financial Committee Member

The Society requires that all financial decisions involve more than one person. To accomplish this, each group is should have a Financial Committee that consists of the seneschal and the Exchequer at a minimum. Baronies are required to have a Financial Committee. As a member of the Financial Committee, you are responsible for making sure that all expenditures of group funds are in accordance with the law and with SCA guidelines and follow any policies or procedures your group may have for deciding how to spend money. If you have questions about this, you should contact the Kingdom Seneschal or Kingdom Exchequer for more information.

Correspondence and Reporting

You are responsible for submitting office paperwork on a timely basis. This is pretty straightforward. You have quarterly reports to submit and deadlines by which they must be turned in to the reporting deputy. The Kingdom Seneschal needs the information from your reports to turn in Kingdom reports to the Crown and the Society Seneschal. If you cannot meet the deadline, let the reporting deputy know as early as possible, and provide a date on which the report will be sent. Then get it in by that date. NOTE: This is a non-negotiable part of the office. Failure to turn in reports is grounds for the revocation of your warrant and installation of a new seneschal.

Conflict Arbitration and Resolution

As seneschal, and therefore the person seen as the leader of the group, you will occasionally find conflicts are being referred to you, or must be addressed by you for resolution. This is probably one of the most difficult parts of the job. There is a section on this topic elsewhere in this handbook, but a few key points to remember are as follows.

- If it looks as if it could be more than a minor skirmish, let the Kingdom Seneschal know about it in advance.
- Decide whether this is an appropriate conflict for you to address.
- Remain as neutral as possible.
- Insist the official Grievance Procedure for the SCA be followed (this appears in the Organizational Handbook).
- Document the situation at the time it occurs.

Public Relations

The seneschal is the primary spokesperson for the SCA in a local group. You may share this responsibility with a responsible, informed member (a chatelaine often takes on this job).

Group Activities

You are responsible for making sure that group activities are run to try to serve the needs of the populace and the SCA. As seneschal, you are also ultimately responsible for making sure that all group SCA activities are in compliance with applicable laws, the requirements of Corpora, and Meridies Kingdom laws and policies. If you are not familiar with the SCA documents when you take office, you should read them as soon as possible and discuss any questions that you might have with the Kingdom Seneschal or the reporting deputy. As the seneschal, you are usually the one who runs business and/or populace meetings, although these meetings may be run by someone whom you delegate or authorize to do so. This may differ in Baronies, however, when the local custom may be to have the Baronage preside over meetings.

Events

This responsibility includes scheduling and overseeing events. When your branch decides to hold an event, you must:

- Contact the Kingdom Calendar Deputy to confirm the event and reserve the date on the Kingdom calendar.
- It is the Local Seneschal's responsibility to submit the event flyer and website and any social media links to the Kingdom Chronicler for publication in Popular Chivalry and to the Kingdom Calendar Deputy. Review your group's event flyer before you send them to Kingdom officers.

The event steward is responsible for a particular event. Event stewards of local events are not typically warranted; however, they must be paid members of the SCA because they are considered temporary officers. (A deputy to the event steward need not be a member, but the head event steward must be.) There's more information in the section on events. Kingdom Level Events are addressed elsewhere in the handbook.

Your Deputies

As seneschal you will probably have some deputies to assist you as seneschal. It is your responsibility to make sure they can do, and are doing, their jobs without getting in their way or trying to do their jobs for them. You might have a deputy to maintain the group's telephone list or manage the group's e-list or social media. You should have a replacement deputy in place within a year of taking office.

Group Officers

It is your responsibility to receive copies of the other officers' reports to make sure they are being filed on time and to monitor their offices to make sure their areas of responsibility are being handled. If you do not get copies of the report, talk with the officer to find out if there's a reason you didn't receive a copy. You should make note in your report of any problems in this area. If this is an ongoing problem it may be necessary to contact the Kingdom Seneschal about the issue.

It is also your responsibility to make sure that the requirements of each office are being met. Should there be a problem, or the office is vacant, it could mean you will have to file the reports for that office while the situation is being resolved.

There is more information about the duties of local officers elsewhere in this handbook.

Branch Types and the Local Seneschal

Introduction

In these groups, the seneschal is the administrative director. As such, the seneschal generally makes most of the administrative decisions of the group. The seneschal is the only person legally empowered to sign contracts.

Shires

Shires are required to have a minimum of five sustaining members of the SCA in order to maintain the group. It is wise for the seneschal of groups with low membership to ensure that membership levels are maintained. If the group drops below five sustaining members for more than a few months, the Kingdom Seneschal may recommend that the Board of Directors remove the group's official status.

Colleges and Strongholds

Colleges are located at or near actual institutions of higher learning and Strongholds are located at or near military bases. Both tend to have transient populations; therefore, a group with college or stronghold status may temporarily drop below the required five sustaining members. In colleges, the seneschal usually acts as the liaison with the real-world college or university in addition to the administrative duties within the group itself.

Cantons

Cantons are semi-independent subsidiary branches of a Barony. Cantons must meet all the normal requirements for a shire. Canton officers must provide their Baronial counterpart with a copy of their reports. This is covered in Corpora's definition of a canton as a group reporting through a Barony. In Meridies, we ask that cantons submit reports directly to their kingdom superior (or a deputy, according to how the kingdom officer administers that office). But, if you are a canton seneschal, you must also give a copy of your report to the Baronial seneschal. You should also be providing a copy of the report to the Baronage unless they have specifically told you not to. It is not unusual for the Barony to require canton seneschals to attend the Baronial officers' meetings. Also, if your canton wants to schedule an event, you must clear it with the Baronial seneschal first. If you are a canton seneschal, you should be keeping both the Baronial seneschal and your Baronage informed about activities in the canton.

Barony

The seneschal of a Barony has a somewhat different role than the seneschal of any other type of group. Being a Baronial seneschal is in many ways like being the kingdom seneschal, only on a smaller scale. Rather than being the sole leader and single most visible representative of the group, as is generally the case in shires, the Baronial seneschal shares that role with a Baron and/or Baroness (Baronage), and often works more "behind the scenes" than does the seneschal of a smaller group.

The kingdom is ruled over by a king and queen, and the kingdom seneschal's job is to see to the smooth administration of the kingdom and its branches. In much the same way, your Baronage is the Crown's representative in the Barony. Your job is to ensure that the Barony runs smoothly, and that any cantons also are running smoothly. Just as the Kingdom Seneschal advises the Crown on matters pertaining to the legal end of the SCA, it is part of your job to advise your Baron and/or Baroness on such matters.

Exactly how the responsibilities are divided between the seneschal and the Baronage varies from group to group, but it is vitally important that you develop a good working relationship with your Baron and Baroness. Meet with them at the commencement of your term of office to discuss who will do what and also to discuss personal goals. There are many things that are negotiable between you and the Baronage, or that may be done by tradition one way in one Barony and another way in another Barony.

The Baron and Baroness are responsible to the Crown for the administration of the lands within the Barony. Typically they are heavily involved in planning the overall goals and direction of the group. They take on much of the morale officer and royal counselor roles that are left to the seneschal in smaller branches. And the Baron and Baroness have one important privilege: they may hold Baronial courts and create Baronial awards with which to recognize the achievements of their populace. Only the Baron and Baroness may hold courts and, with permission of the Crown, bestow armigerous awards.

The Baronage has the right to be consulted on any matters they deem important to the growth and well-being of the Barony and may exercise direct appeals to the Crown if they disagree with an action. This includes the appointment of Baronial officers and how money is spent within and on behalf of the Barony. They may not directly appoint or remove Baronial officers nor make unilateral decisions about how the Barony's money is spent (nobody can do this!) but it would behoove a Baronial seneschal to be mindful of their wishes and work to avoid any administrative conflicts.

Whether Barony meetings are run by the Baronage, the seneschal, or both jointly is usually a matter of custom. If the Baron and Baroness prefer to run the meetings they may do so; however, they may prefer to leave that up to you.

Only group seneschals can reserve dates on the Kingdom Calendar. Event bids should have the approval of both the Baron and Baroness (because they are the group's rulers), and the Baronial seneschal (because you are ultimately responsible for overseeing the event steward, signing contracts, and making sure the event meets SCA guidelines). Be sure you are well versed with the section on events in this handbook as it should answer most any question that might come up.

You will also serve, per Society financial policy, as a member of the Barony's financial committee, and you should be a signatory on the checking account. The Exchequer is also required to serve on the committee. The Baronage is not required to do so, but may if they wish, and they probably will. Other officers or members of the group may serve on the financial committee, depending on the wishes of the Barony. All members of the financial committee will participate in making decisions about budgeting and expenditures. NOTE: Financial decisions should never be effectively in the hands of any one person or couple, be that the Baronage, the Exchequer, or you!

You are still the legal representative of the SCA in the Barony's area, and you must sign any contracts the group enters into, i.e., for meeting or event sites. It is Society policy that only a warranted seneschal may sign a contract of any sort. This is Society policy and isn't negotiable—only warranted seneschals may sign contracts.

Both you and the Baronage should work together to solve problems the group may have. This includes, but is not limited to, officer problems, issues concerning minors, site rules and restrictions, and interpersonal conflicts. Frequently in a large group, people with a complaint will have a "favorite" person to go to—a certain officer or the Baron or Baroness—but it is important that you communicate with each other about problems and potential problems.

Don't let someone in the group "play you off" against each other. It's best to present a united front. This is easiest to do if you keep your Baron and Baroness informed about anything you think might develop into a problem. If you keep them informed, they will be likely to return the favor and not let you be surprised, either.

If you are having problems with the Baronage themselves, try to approach them directly. Schedule a meeting with the Baronage, and talk about what's bothering you. Many, many problems are the result of unclear communication or uncertainty about the other person's expectations. If you really feel you're hitting a brick wall, contact the regional obudsman or the Kingdom Seneschal. Perhaps one of them can mediate for you. Do keep in mind, that your Baronage will usually have the deciding vote, since they represent the Crown within the Barony. A good way to look at it is the Baronage is the voice of custom and tradition while the Seneschal is the voice of the law. The Baronage may cast a vote where custom and tradition are considered but never in trump of statute or administrative guidelines.

You will be involved in overseeing any cantons the Barony has, in a general way. The canton seneschal is required to give you a copy of his/her reports to Kingdom, and the canton must contact you to get approval before scheduling an event on the kingdom calendar. Some Baronies require that the canton seneschals attend Baronial officer meetings, and this is probably a good idea.

Keep informed about what's going on in each canton, and let the canton seneschal know that you're available to provide assistance as needed. It's not a bad idea to attend an occasional canton meeting, either. But unless you detect signs of real trouble that the canton seneschal seems unable to handle, let them do things for themselves.

You will appoint and oversee such deputies as you deem necessary to assist you in performing the duties of your office. Being the seneschal of a large group is quite demanding, and besides the benefit of having help with the duties of your office, you'll make members of your group feel more involved by letting them help out. Although, your deputies will have their own areas of responsibilities, if they fail to perform those duties it will ultimately be your responsibility.

Make your deputies accountable by staying in touch and working closely with them. Also remember your deputies may have to work directly with the Baronage and don't appoint anyone to whom they might object as a deputy or future officer

This cannot be stressed enough—it is imperative that you and the Baronage cooperate with each other. Follow their lead in establishing your relative roles, but remember that you do have a lot to offer to lessen the weight of their coronets. There are many areas of overlapping responsibilities...and a well-established Barony will probably have developed customary ways of dealing with most of these. If you take care to communicate, inform, and learn their wishes, you will probably find that you can work very well with your Baron and Baroness.

Formal Pollings

Below are the rules for formal pollings within a branch of the Kingdom of Meridies. Formal pollings include Baronial succession and group status changes (advancement, demotion or dissolution). They do not apply to the everyday running of a branch.

1. All formal pollings within the Kingdom of Meridies will be done from the Kingdom Seneschals office. This shall include, but is not limited to, pollings for Baronial succession, for group designation changes, and group dissolution for reasons other than non-reporting.
2. Ballots will be mailed directly to the recipient at the mailing address provided by the SCA's Corporate Office. The mailing will contain a return envelope pre stamped and pre-labeled with the address to which the ballots should be returned.
3. Every paid member within the zip codes belonging to the group(s) to be polled will be provided a ballot.
4. Groups may define ways in which additional members whom are active within the group but do not reside in the zip codes may be polled. This approval process should be in place and in writing and a copy on file with the Kingdom Seneschal's office before the polling process has begun. For Baronial polling, this will be the meeting in which the current Baron and/or Baroness announce their intention to step down.

5. Appeals may be made directly to the Kingdom Seneschal's Office.

Paperwork

Introduction

The seneschal's job has many facets. While the job of seneschal requires many so called "soft skills"—communication, compassion, etc.—the "hard" skills such as reporting and filling out forms are a bit more straightforward. Pretty much anyone can learn to complete a quarterly report and to keep a file box.

Reports

Reports from local seneschals are due to the Kingdom Seneschal's Reporting Deputy on a quarterly basis. They are due by 10th of May (Q1), August (Q2), November (Q3) and February (Q4). These dates are based on when the Kingdom Seneschal's reports are due to Society. The form can be downloaded from the Kingdom website and stored on your computer for completion. The reporting deputy will accept your reports via email at: (seneschal-reporting-deputy@kingdom.meridies.org).

Report Forms

A blank report form can be found on the Kingdom Seneschal's website. You may use that form or create your own. If you create your own, please follow the basic format given on the standard form. All the information on the report form is needed for the Kingdom Seneschal to understand what is going on in your group. Please complete everything on the report form. If something does not apply to your group, put "none" or "n/a." Don't just leave it blank.

Tracking Group Membership

You can track memberships in several ways. One way is to ask, about once a month, who has a sustaining membership, count heads, and do the same for family memberships. Then take an average. Another way is to send a sign-up sheet around the room at a well-attended meeting, asking people to sign under "Sustaining," "Associate/Family," or "Non-member". You can request a copy of your group's membership list for your zip codes from the Kingdom Seneschal. Address listings are not available except under special circumstances and only the Kingdom Seneschal can request them.

We should all play where we have fun. Sometimes through the circumstances of geography, history, or other situations a person may choose to play in a group while they do not live in your group's zip code. Your group should have a way to recognize members in this situation. The procedures for doing so should be standardized.

Late Reports

It is imperative to understand just how important it is to send your reports in on time! If your report is late, it has a domino effect. The reporting deputy may have their report to the Kingdom Seneschal delayed and the Kingdom Seneschal will have a difficult time sending an accurate report to the Society Seneschal. All in all, it can get quite messy! Sometimes there are unavoidable delays. Personal and work life have a way of "knowing" when you have a report to do and often seem to center crises around that time. Please, let someone know if you will be sending in your report late. Contact the reporting deputy or the Kingdom Seneschal.

Chances are you will find a very sympathetic listener. They just want to be sure you haven't forgotten. Failure to submit reports in a timely manner will jeopardize your warrant as seneschal and may cause suspension of your group. The Kingdom Seneschal has the right to suspend your warrant as a group seneschal if reports are very late or have been missed for two consecutive reporting periods. If your group is suspended, you cannot hold events, meetings, practices, etc. until the suspension is lifted. Activities may only be undertaken that are necessary to remove the group suspension.

You should receive copies of reports from the other officers in your group as they are due to their Kingdom superiors. As seneschal, it's a good idea to know the reporting schedules of the other offices; not only for this purpose, but in case you should have to submit a report for a temporarily vacant office. If someone fails to provide you with a copy of their report, remind the officer but go ahead and send in your report even if you don't have reports from all the other officers.

Files

Maintaining files may not be your idea of fun, but some things just have to be done! When you start your tenure as seneschal you may or may not receive the group's files in working condition. This section contains guidelines on how to organize and maintain your files.

File Contents

How you organize your files is up to you, but make sure if something happens to you someone else will be able to figure out your system! Your files should contain reference materials and content files.

Reference Materials

All seneschals should have copies of the following reference materials in their most recent printing.

- Organizational Handbook of the Society for Creative Anachronism (includes Corpora)
- Kingdom Law
- Seneschal's Handbook
- Other Officers Handbooks
- Local Branch Financial Policy
- Local group policies

Content File

Files should be created for the following items. Always save electronic files to external disc in case of computer disasters.

- Meeting notes
- Correspondence with officers including their quarterly reports
- Correspondence TO people outside the group
- Correspondence FROM people outside the group
- Seneschal's reports
- Local member contact list

- Event reports and site contracts
- New member/demo/pr information
- Group inventory (maintained by the exchequer or reeve)

Optional Files

If you're really into filing you may want to have some of the following:

- Projects—both in progress and completed
- Items of interest (newspaper articles, book lists, etc)
- Back issues of local and kingdom newsletters
- Local order of precedence

File Retention

As a general rule, event and officers reports should be kept a minimum of seven years. If space permits or you have a group historian, keep pretty much everything. If the seneschal's files came to you disorganized or incomplete don't be overwhelmed with the thought of getting them in order. It's an excellent opportunity for you to better familiarize yourself with the history of the group and can be an excellent group project.

Contracts

The Kingdom Seneschal of Meridies is the only person authorized to sign any contract which commits the SCA Corporation or the Kingdom to perform in any way.

This includes contracts for SCA participation in paid demos, Renaissance festivals, or other activities where the SCA is paid a fee for participating. Once payment is involved, it becomes a matter for the Kingdom Seneschal to put before the financial committee. If your group is anticipating being involved in any activities for which you have a written contract (for example, the local Chamber of Commerce is holding a renaissance festival and offers to pay your group a set amount of money if you will provide X number of fighting demonstrations), you need to contact the Kingdom Seneschal at once. This does not include situations where you volunteer and in gratitude of your efforts, an organization makes a donation to your group. If you are unsure, contact the Kingdom Seneschal.

The local seneschal is the only officer authorized to commit the local group to any kind of contractual obligation. These contracts are most often for site rental for meetings or events, and other event-related contracts such as equipment rental.

It is important that the contract clearly state that it is between the other organization and your local branch. You cannot sign a contract that simply commits the "Society for Creative Anachronism" to do anything. You do not have that authority. The Kingdom Seneschal may delegate the authority to sign such a contract to you, as the local branch seneschal. This is not a blanket authority, but only exists for a single contract. You must contact the Kingdom Seneschal well in advance of the time the signature will be needed.

Contracts are legal documents. The consequences to both individuals and the SCA if the terms of the contract are not met are real. If you sign a contract saying that your group will pay a certain amount per event attendee to the site owner, abide by certain rules, and vacate the site by a certain time, you are obligated to do that. If you sign a contract saying that you will provide certain services in exchange for certain considerations, then you are obligated to provide them. Take this responsibility seriously, and make sure your event stewards do, as well.

Waivers

Waivers are a fact of SCA life. As seneschal, you are ultimately responsible for seeing that your group follows SCA waiver policies, and for educating group members on what these policies are. The policies have changed many times over the years, so it is no wonder people may get confused.

The standard text for an adult waiver is the same as that which appears on the SCA membership forms. No alteration of this text is allowed, because it invalidates the waiver. People completing waivers are not permitted to change or cross out anything. There is also a standard SCA waiver for minors, and it likewise cannot be altered.

Gate Paperwork

If your group holds an event, whomever is working gate should be familiar with the following pieces of paperwork. The forms used at gate are available on the kingdom's website under Kingdom Seneschal. Please see Appendix A of this book for a flow chart which may help with gate procedures.

- Membership cards (Blue versus white)
- Consent to Participate and Release of Liability (“Roster Waiver”)
- Sign-in Sheet
- Minor’s Consent to Participate and Hold Harmless Agreement (“Minor Waiver”)
- Notarized Medical Authorization for Minors (“Medical Authorization”)
- Designated Adult-in-Charge of a Minor (“Adult in Charge”)
- Family Minor Waiver

Membership Cards

When a person buys an SCA membership, he or she has the opportunity to complete the waiver on the membership form. If this is done, the Registry will send the member a blue membership card. The blue card signifies that the person has completed a waiver and the waiver is on file with the Registry’s office in California. The waiver on the membership form must be completed absolutely correctly, and dated, or a blue card will not be issued.

If someone doesn’t fill out the waiver, or doesn’t fill it out completely, that person receives a white membership card. He or she still is a national member, but doesn’t have a waiver on file and should be treated as a non-member for purposes of signing paperwork at an event or fighter practice.

Most people want a blue card, and most of those who receive white cards did not intend for that to happen. It is possible to get a replacement card for free, by completing a new membership form, including the waiver, and checking the “replacement card” box on the form.

Please note the signature on the back of a blue card is extraneous. You can ask people to sign them, but it is not required. If the back of their blue membership card is not signed, they do not need to sign the non-member waiver.

Consent to Participate and Release of Liability

The “Roster Waiver” is a roster containing the full waiver text at the top. This is for adult non-members (or people with a white card) to sign. Please make sure that the roster waiver is clearly labeled as a waiver! When we use a clipboard, as is commonly the case, it is sometimes hard to see the title. It’s important that people signing the roster waiver know (either because it is clearly labeled as such, or because the workers at the gate tell them so) that they are signing a waiver.

Sign-In Sheet

The sign-in sheet does not contain waiver text and is simply a record of attendees. It includes such information such as the member and SCA name, membership number, expiration date, which waiver page they signed (if applicable), feast/no feast, amount paid etc. Every attendee’s name should appear on this form, even SCA members who have blue cards (whether adults or children). All attendees need to be listed, even small children.

Minor’s Consent to Participate and Hold Harmless Agreement

The “Minor Waiver” is to be filled out by every minor which does not have a blue card of their own. This form is required regardless of if the minor is attending with their parents/guardians or with a designated adult in charge. If the minor is attending with a designated adult in charge, this form should be completed before arrival at the event by the parent or guardian of the child.

Notarized Medical Authorization for Minors

The “Medical Authorization for Minors” is for minors who attend an event without their parents or guardian. NOTICE: If an event is held within the State of Florida, this form must be notarized and must be filled out by the parent or guardian of the minor, signed, and notarized by a registered Notary Public before they arrive at the event. Copies of this form, duly executed, should be in the possession of the named minor, at least one adult named in the document and present at the event, one to be left at gate with the other registration paperwork, and one with the parent or guardian executing the Medical Authorization. For events held in other states within Meridies, notarization is no required.

Designated Adult-in-Charge of a Minor

The “Adult in Charge” form allows a minor to attend an event with an adult (18 or over) whom is not their legal parent or guardian. Again, this form must be executed by the parent or guardian of the child in question, so usually it will need to be completed before arrival at the event. You will need three copies of this form. One is for the gate staff and for event records, one is to be in the possession of one of the designated adults who are present at the event, and one in the possession of the parent/legal guardian executing the Designated Adult form. One original (for the gate staff) and two photocopies are acceptable.

Family Minor Waiver

The Family Minor Waiver exists to help large families. This can be used by up to 5 children if the children all have the same parents and/or guardians and are attending with their parents or guardians. This is the only time in which you can have multiple children on the same waiver.

Non-Event Waivers

If you are holding a local activity which will have SCA fighting, you still have to deal with waivers. Activities in the category include demos, fighter practices (There are no 'unofficial SCA practices. It's either official, or the SCA doesn't know anything about it) and other more unusual cases. If it is sponsored by the group, publicized locally as a group function, and has fighting, waivers must be collected.

According to Meridies marshalling procedures, the knight marshal is responsible for seeing that nobody participates in a fighter practice without having a waiver on file. Members issued a blue membership card do not have to sign a waiver; however, you should discuss this with your knight marshal and make sure that he/she is aware of, and conforming to, this requirement. If you detect a problem here, please contact either the Kingdom Seneschal or the Earl Marshal.

The following types of events are exempted from needing waivers:

- Business meetings, guild or interest group meetings where no fighting occurs
- Dance practices
- Demos (fighters and marshals at demos must have waivers on file, however.)
- Archery practice (Because archery is not considered a combat-related activity, the SCA does not require waivers to shoot archery. However, the Kingdom of Meridies requires those shooting archery (except at demos) to have waivers on file with the archer marshal.)

Minors and Waivers

A parent can complete a waiver for a minor child as part of the membership application, and receive a blue card for the child. In that case, the child does not need a waiver for an event. However, if the child attends an event without a parent or legal guardian present, the parent must complete a "Medical Authorization for Minors" form, designating someone who is with the child to authorize medical treatment if necessary. (It is recommended, but not required, that a parent complete one of these forms for a child even if the parent is with the child.) A child who does not have a blue card must present a minor's waiver at each event. This form must be signed by the parent. Obviously, if a child is going to attend an event without a parent, some advance planning must be done. Make sure your members are aware of this, and provide forms as needed.

Please be aware, especially if you live near a border with another kingdom, that the above policies are specific to Meridies. They are virtually identical to the SCA kingdoms national requirements. However, any kingdom has the right to be stricter in its waiver requirements than the SCA minimums, and many exercise that right. If you travel to another kingdom, it is possible that:

- You may be required to complete a waiver regardless of your membership status
- You may not be allowed to fight if you don't have a blue membership card, and

- A minor may not be allowed to attend the event without a parent or legal guardian.

These are just examples of requirements in some kingdoms that are more stringent than Meridies' requirements. If you or members of your group plan to travel to an out-of-kingdom event, you may save yourselves some headaches if you contact the seneschal of the sponsoring group, or the event steward, ahead of time and make sure you will be able to meet their waiver requirements.

Storage of Waivers

After an event, waivers are supposed to be sent to the Kingdom Waiver Deputy. It is not necessary for the local group to keep a copy of them. However, they should be labeled with the name, date, and location of the event before being sent to Kingdom.

Communication

Communication is 90% of the seneschal's job. A lot of this will be face-to-face communication, but it isn't always possible or even desirable, to talk to someone in person. You will use the phone a great deal in your office, along with Email and Internet user groups.

Telephone Calls

Telephone calls are not "official" communications. If something major is being decided via phone, you need to follow it up with a letter or e-mail to confirm what was discussed. However, telephone calls are a necessary and frequent part of the job. Here are some guidelines for using the telephone for SCA business.

Call at a reasonable hour. A good general guideline is never to call somebody after 9:00 p.m., or before 10 a.m., unless you know for a fact they are willing to take calls at that time. Be mindful of the time zones within Meridies. Also keep in mind that a person may not be able to receive personal phone calls during work hours. Check the Regnum in Popular Chivalry for any other time restrictions for phone calls the person you're calling might have.

Use modern names unless you are positive that you are calling a strictly SCA household, always ask for people by their modern names, not their SCA names. Identify yourself by your modern name, too, if leaving a message with a non-SCA person. When calling non-SCA entities such as demo clients or prospective sites, always use modern names.

Once you have your party on the phone, be pleasant, but get down to business quickly. Ask your question; give your information, or whatever it is you called to do. After the business part of the call is over, you can always chat if the other person is willing. You don't need to be brusque or abrupt, but get the business accomplished quickly, and if you are inclined to chat, be sensitive to whether the other person is also so inclined.

If you expect the call might take longer than two or three minutes—for example, if you've got a problem you need to discuss—ask the person if this is a good time to talk. If they say no, ask when would be a better time for you to call.

Leave clear, complete messages on voicemail. And if you don't have voicemail yourself, you should strongly consider getting it (or an answering machine). They aren't expensive and will make you infinitely easier to reach. In addition, make sure your voicemail is not full.

Take notes if you're calling for information. You don't want to hang up and find yourself half an hour later trying to remember what you were told.

Receiving calls is a fact of life for a group seneschal. Be prepared to get a certain number of phone calls from people in your group wanting to vent about something. In this sort of call, your role is mainly to listen and, if you can, be sympathetic. Frequently, people don't really expect the local seneschal to do anything about their complaint or beef, but they do want someone to listen to their side of things. However, you are not on call constantly. Feel free to enforce your own reasonable limits on phone call lengths and times. Let your group members know what hours and days are okay to call you.

Written Communication

In your capacity as seneschal, you'll be writing letters occasionally, and sending quarterly reports. Using e-mail has become the accepted mode of communication, but undoubtedly there will still be times when you need to find an envelope and a stamp and send a hard copy of something. When using e-mail, you need to be conscious of whether or not you need to generate a hard copy for your files.

Any formal correspondence with non-SCA people or entities should follow standard business letter format. This means your address and the date appear at the top, followed by your correspondent's address, a greeting along the lines of "Dear Mr. Smith:" the body of your letter, and a closing such as "Sincerely." Always use modern names in letters to non-SCA members, site owners, the media, etc.

If the correspondence is done by email, it is not necessary to include the date and your correspondent's address. You may wish to include all of your contact information in your signature.

If your correspondent is in the SCA, the standard style can change a bit. "Writing forsoothly" is fun for many people, and adds a bit of pleasure to the business of writing, but you should not let fancy phrases get in the way of your communication. Usually, it's best to use an SCA-style greeting, stay fairly concise and plain in the body of your letter, and close with a more "period-sounding" closing.

- Greeting—SCA correspondence frequently uses a fairly flowery beginning, such as "Unto Their Royal Majesties of Meridies come greetings from...." or such.
- Closing—Standard closings include things such as, "In service to Crown and Kingdom," "B/y my hand this XXVth day of November, A.S. XXXIII," or "Written in my keep in the Shire of Ne'erdowell."

Always have the modern date somewhere in your letter. "A.S." dates are fun, but troublesome to translate. If you use an A.S. date, put the modern year after it in parentheses, or use the phrase, "being 2XXX in the common reckoning." Include your modern name and contact information somewhere in the letter so your correspondent can answer you.

Envelopes are no place to be forsooth. The purpose of an envelope is to ensure your letter gets where it's going. Don't use SCA names or titles when addressing envelopes! If you can't resist using a name or title, or want to call the recipient's attention to the fact that this is SCA business, add "Attn: TRM" or "Attn: Kingdom Seneschal" or something like that in an out-of-the-way place, such as the lower left-hand corner or the back of the envelope.

SCA committees and groups now conduct much of their business via e-mail or e-group. If you are not a member of your branch's e-group or facebook page, now is a good time to join. Branch seneschals are required to join the Meridian Seneschals e-group on Yahoo. This e-group is used to distribute very important information such as request for KLE bids, policy decisions, as well as provide a place for discussion.

Never send a letter written in anger. If emotions are running high, and you write a letter, put it aside for at least 24 hours before mailing it. Then reread it and make sure it says what you want it to say, in the tone you want it to take. The written word is much harder to take back than the spoken word! It's also a good idea to have someone you trust read your letter for accuracy and tone.

Conflict Arbitration and Resolution

In general, the seneschal ends up being a jack of all trades: administrator, director, counselor, and cheerleader. The seneschal often acts as a mediator when conflicts arise within the group. Aside from the paperwork aspect of the job, the most important role is probably the role of cheerleader. The seneschal needs to inspire the populace of the group to grow and change. As seneschal, you will expect much and much will be expected of you. Learn from both your successes and your failures what works best for you and your group.

Problem Solving and Conflict Resolution

The SCA is an organization filled with intelligent and creative people many of whom are deeply involved in their hobby and care passionately about it. For a number of them, it is also their major social milieu. Of course what happens in the organization matters to those who are deeply involved in it, and the very sense of community that the SCA tends to engender also causes people to wrap themselves up in the doings of their shire, barony, or kingdom to an extent that can make it difficult for them to be objective or rational when things don't happen as they'd like.

There is no way to write an instructional manual that will give specific advice on how to resolve all the problems a branch can encounter. The purpose of this section is to give some general guidelines which, if followed, should prove helpful in dealing with conflict and difficulties.

Local seneschals are frequently called upon to act as arbiters in interpersonal conflicts, or to resolve problems that arise when members of the group have different ideas about how things should work. The source of the conflict or disagreement may well be outside your jurisdiction, but any behaviors which affect the group dynamics are within your jurisdiction. While you should not actively seek out this role, it will almost certainly find you from time to time.

And it's worth remembering that the goal is always to fix the problem. As seneschal, your aim is to keep your group running smoothly, with the people in the group more or less enjoying their pursuits in the Current Middle Ages. While you won't always keep everyone happy (and some complaints, quite honestly, have little or no merit), if you can manage to keep things on a fairly even keel and keep the group occupied with productive activities, your tenure will be a rousing success.

Types of conflict include: Interpersonal relationship problems, disagreements about group activities—events, expenditures, etc. and conflicts originating outside the SCA. It's important to know what type of conflict you're dealing with since that can be a factor in determining your course of action.

You should step in when the conflict is affecting the group's ability to function, or the ability of others to enjoy the SCA. Allowing a problem to continue unchecked and/or unresolved can cause irreparable harm to personal relationships; which can in turn, have adverse effect on a group's dynamics. It's better to step in and work towards a resolution; or at the very least, an understanding than to risk permanent damage to the morale of your group.

Problems should always be documented as well as possible. Any e-mail exchanges that deal with problem resolution should be printed out and kept, at least for a while. One frequent problem that arises in conflict resolution attempts is that memories often differ on who said what in a phone conversation or face-to-face meeting. E-mail is not always a good medium for conflict resolution, due to its impersonal nature, but if e-mail is exchanged, at least a written record is readily available.

Use the following guidelines to address conflict:

- Remain neutral. If you can't remain neutral, find someone who can (i.e., someone else in the group, the Kingdom seneschal or regional ombudsman, or someone suggested by one of these people).
- Communication/discussion with disputing parties—preferably with everyone in the same room.
- Get it in writing if you can. You'd be surprised how "huge matters" can suddenly become "not such a big deal" when people are told they need to put it in writing.
- If it is SCA based, include the cause.
- If not SCA based, focus on the effect on the group.
- Try to reach agreement, which will be compromise—nobody will get everything they want.

Many group problems can be resolved or headed off by clear communication. When you are leading the group in a particular course of action, make sure you are clear about what you are doing and why. Providing information—in a helpful rather than patronizing fashion—can stop many problems before they are well underway, and people are more willing to put up with a course of action they might not totally endorse if the reasons for the action are explained to them. Don't make the mistake of trying to control information to increase your own standing or power. That trick rarely works for long, and frequently backfires.

You need to draw a clear distinction between what is group business and what is personal business. You don't need to be spreading gossip about Lady Soandso's pending divorce and you must stay neutral in disputes between other members of your group. Be very careful to distinguish between your personal agenda (everyone has one) and what is best for the group.

In meetings, allow plenty of time for discussion of topics, but establish some ground rules for discussion and stick with them. "No name-calling" should go without saying, but you'd be surprised, so say it anyway. Other ground rules should reflect the basic SCA requirement that those participating in Society functions behave like ladies and gentlemen. If people are getting too far off the "official" topic, you should drag them back with a gentle reminder.

Be an active listener when people come to you. Give them your undivided attention if at all possible, ask questions occasionally to clarify, and be sure you understand their position. If someone is seeking advice, you might ask them what they think their options are. If you can get them to talk through their options, then they own the solution they come up with. And many times, people merely want to vent. They aren't necessarily expecting you to solve their problem. They may just want to talk to someone.

Never be afraid to say that you don't have an answer right then. "I'm not sure what to do about that. I'll have to think it over and get back to you" is far better than offering hasty, ill-considered advice. A side bonus is that, when you check back in with them, you may discover the problem has resolved itself in the meantime. The key is to do what you say and get back to them. Don't compound the problem by being ineffective.

Things to remember if there is disagreement on what the group should do:

- You will not always get unanimity from the group.
- It is not your responsibility to keep everybody happy; in fact, most of the time it is impossible for everybody to have their own way.
- You cannot make everybody agree, but you can do your best to make sure that the disagreement does not have a serious effect on the dynamics of the group.
- Depending on the situation and the people involved, it may not be possible to resolve the situation at the local level.

If the dispute is something that you think might come to the attention of the Kingdom Seneschal, or other people outside the group, notify the Kingdom Seneschal about the problem. Surprises of this sort are not good! If the Kingdom Seneschal does hear about a problem in your group, you can bet you'll be contacted. It's usually better if you contact the Kingdom Seneschal first (or the regional ombudsman, if you prefer). This doesn't mean that they will step in automatically, or that you've failed. It merely means that you were sensible enough to recognize that a potential storm was brewing and gave your boss a "head's up" about it.

Arbitrating a Dispute

Sometimes, a dispute may come down to just a few folks with opposing viewpoints. Getting those folks together in the same room to discuss the matter and work towards a resolution can be the best way to arbitrate their dispute. This section contains a general process to follow when handling conflicts with this method.

First, meet with both parties, if possible, in a neutral place. This might be your home or the home of an uninvolved member; it might be a meeting room or a restaurant. Avoid meeting at the home of anyone involved in the dispute. That way nobody has the "home court advantage."

Set some ground rules to begin with. No interrupting, no raised voices. One person gets to tell their side of the story, and then the other person tells their side. After both have spoken, each can address the other's points in turn. After you have listened to both of them, you should strongly consider asking them each to write down their version of the problem.

Have them write down what they want to have happen as a result of the meeting. What would they consider a good solution? And what are they prepared to give up in order to get some of what they want? Explain that what you are working toward is a solution that everyone can live with. If the parties insist that they cannot give an inch, then tell them you're sorry, but without some acceptance of the idea of compromise, you can't help them.

Example

Here's an example of how a dispute could occur: One person details his plans for the event he's event stewarding; somebody else notices that the event steward has failed to include any arts and sciences activities and concludes that the event steward, who has often joked about "artsy types" in the past, has something against A&S. In reality, the event steward noticed that there was no indoor site for displays, or comfortable area for classes, and wasn't sure people would be willing to do these activities outdoors in the middle of a field. But instead of addressing this at a planning meeting, the event steward simply sidestepped the issue; while the offended party didn't ask why there wasn't any A&S but rather went and grumbled to the assemblage at the shire dance practice. Et voila, a full-blown "fighters vs. arts" controversy erupts by the time of the next populace meeting.

The root of most SCA problems is failed communication. If you can manage to cut through the miscommunication in the above scenario, or other similar ones, and state in a non-confrontational way what has happened and what can be done, your chances of fixing the problem are much better.

One of the most important things to know during an arbitration is when you've done all you can do. If headway has been made, don't allow the parties to begin rehashing what they've already covered; this can get the matter heated up all over again. On the other hand, baby steps may be in order. If you can only progress so far before hitting a blank wall, it might be best to send the parties home with a "what is the least you will accept in this resolution" assignment and reconvene in a day or two. Having time to think about what the other party had to say could change minds and cooler heads may prevail the next time you meet.

Public Relations and Recruiting

This section provides guidelines on working with the media, including examples of press releases and letters, as well as guidelines and procedures for recruiting and retaining new members.

Guidelines for Dealing With the Media

Exposure in the media (local television, radio, newspaper, weekly magazines) is extremely helpful to your group in recruiting new members. It also helps with public goodwill, which can be instrumental in gaining access to sites. This section contains guidelines for dealing with the media.

It is the policy of the Office of Society Seneschal and Vice President of Operations that specific guidelines pertaining to interactions with modern media organizations and staff will be set forth in this document and subject to regular review in accordance with the needs of the Society and our ever changing modern environment. This policy crosses into both the 'game' side of the Society, and into modern era operations. The General Policy is to have a unified, professional approach to informing the Media of our purpose, activities, and when necessary, a position on relevant topics and events. To this end, the Society Seneschal and Vice President of Operations will appoint via formal warrant a deputy Society Seneschal and Assistant Vice President for Media Relations.

Basic press kits will be created, maintained, and distributed to Kingdoms and the Corporate office by the Deputy Society Seneschal for Media Relations and be made available for download online. It is always acceptable to obtain and distribute these to the media and any interested body.

Be sure to contact the KMR for the official list of words and topics to avoid prior to doing an interview. When being interviewed, do not use SCA jargon. For example, instead of "mundane," say "the general public"; for "garb," use "costume." If the interview is for the print media, ask to review the story before it goes to press.

There are very specific rules that film crews and commercial photographers must follow if they wish to record activities at SCA events. Branch Seneschals must inform the Media Officer if they are contacted by a film crew or photographer.

Local individuals, branches, or other entities should report within 7 days any media interaction to their Kingdom Media Representative and the Kingdom Seneschal whenever one or more of the following is true.

- Outside Media Venue requests material for a story.
- Outside Media Venue arrives unannounced at an SCA event or activity.
- Outside Media Venue contacts the SCA regarding an ongoing news item.
- A story—positive or negative—regarding the SCA appears in an outside media publication.

Recruiting Newcomers

This section contains guidelines on how to recruit new members to the SCA. Most groups have a Chatelaine to help with newcomers but if your group does not have one – this activity can fall to you. Before you begin looking for new members, take the time to read the Chatelaine’s handbook. It contains a lot of helpful information.

Hold meetings and fighter practices in a public place, such as a park or community center. If people can’t find you, they can’t become members. Also, participate in local fairs, celebrations, malls, grand openings, theatrical events, student orientations at colleges, concerts, etc. Be sure that your group is welcome and invited to all of these events and that the event itself is one you are willing to be associated with.

We get used to seeing duct tape, last year’s garb with the holes in it, and rusty armor. But, is this the image we want to portray to the public? Remind your group that they are in public trying to impress people and request that they look as good as possible. Hang banners, make tabards, and invite the musicians to practice before and after meetings. Hide as much of the modern stuff as possible. Discourage items which might frighten away newcomers or give a negative impression of the SCA (i.e don’t talk about how bad the fire ants were at this one event or how much it rained at another). Always, always remember to leave any site you use cleaner than you found it. Nothing will ruin public relations faster than leaving a mess.

Do demonstrations for libraries, scout groups, retirement communities, and other organizations that would enjoy what you have to show them. Volunteer for your local public television fundraiser and get them to give you some air time in exchange. Adopt a section of highway to clean up (and clean it up frequently and well). Make your group a respected and respectable part of the community.

Put up posters and arts and sciences displays wherever you can get the space. Some good places to try are libraries, game stores, community art centers and student unions. Make sure that in all cases you include an explanation of what the SCA is and how to contact the local group. Ask your local library if you can place informational bookmarks in books that would be of interest to SCA members. Get on the internet. If your group does not have anyone able or willing to host a web page, make sure that your group’s contact information is up to date on the Kingdom web page. Create a Facebook page for your group (see the Social Media Policy for guidelines). Keep the information on your internet presences up to date and easy to access.

Group Activities

Group Meetings

Meetings can be as formal or informal as your group dictates. There is no right or wrong way to conduct a meeting if what you're doing is working for your group. This section is not intended to mandate how you run your local group meetings, it is just a tool for a new seneschal or the seneschal who might be needing a little help in that area.

There are a number of elements that go into a good meeting, but basically, a good meeting is one where the group doesn't leave feeling that their time was wasted. There are many things that can be done to make sure that the meetings that your group holds are good meetings, and most of them are under your control and direction. In this section, let's look at some of them.

Make it easy for people to find the meetings. Hold meetings on a regular schedule. Some groups meet once a week, some every two weeks, and some every month. It doesn't really matter how often the meetings are held, as long as the needs of the group are being met by the schedule. It is, however, important for people to know when the meetings will be held without having to ask someone each time.

If possible, hold meetings in the same place each time. For those groups that cover a large amount of territory and make a point of moving their meeting sites to accommodate as many people as possible, try to schedule the meetings in the same location in each area where the meetings are held. This will make it much easier for people to find the meetings if they have been out of touch for a while.

Make sure that everyone knows in advance what the focus of the meeting will be. Some groups have meeting in the following formats:

- Business meetings once a month with the other meeting(s) that month focusing on something else, usually arts and sciences activities.
- A short business session at the beginning of each meeting, followed by some other activity.
- Everything at each meeting: business, A&S, fighter practice, dance practice, etc.

It doesn't really matter how your meetings are focused as long as the needs of the group are served and the group knows when each activity is scheduled. Also, do your best to see that the meetings are enjoyable and productive. Nobody likes to feel that they are wasting their time.

Have a pre-established method of communicating a change in the planned meeting time or place. This can run the gamut from a phone tree to an announcement on the group web page or e-group (if you have one) to a sign on the door. If you rely on a web page or e-mail do be aware of those members who aren't hooked up to the Internet.

Use the following guidelines to prepare an agenda in advance for the meeting.

- Organize the agenda so that all of your information is included.
- Leave space for people who will arrive at the meeting with announcements they wish to make.
- Before the meeting starts, ask anyone who wishes to make an announcement to sign up on the agenda (your local herald can help with this). There is absolutely nothing wrong with pre-screening these announcements to make sure that they are appropriate for the SCA meeting context.

- Organize the agenda so it flows smoothly and all the business is covered. In some groups the person is called up to make the announcement, while in others the herald makes the announcement.

When issues are brought up for discussion, lead the discussion so that everyone who wishes to participate in the discussion has an equal opportunity to do so. This will mean controlling the discussion so that no one dominates it to the exclusion of others. It will also mean closing the discussion when nothing new is being said. Beating the proverbial dead horse is usually a waste of time.

Some discussions need to be tabled after a while, pending perhaps another discussion or to give someone time to obtain missing information. If this happens, make it very clear when the discussion will be resumed, and make sure that it is indeed resumed at the announced time.

Close the meeting when it's finished. It's time to close the meeting when all the information has been conveyed, all the announcements have been made, all the discussions have been held, and there's nothing more to say. The meeting should close so there is enough time to clean up the site and be out by closing time, if your site has such a deadline.

A good meeting does not just happen. It has structure and form and is not run by a committee. Do use a format, however. Doing so makes it much easier to ensure that all the necessary announcements are made and the planned discussions are held.

Example

- Although the content will depend on what is going on with the group, an example of a meeting format is as follows:
- Welcome the group.
- Introduce and welcome new members and guests.
- Announce upcoming events and pass around seneschals' flyers that you have received.
- Announce upcoming group activities, such as special interest group meetings, fighter practices, the next business meeting, etc.
- Officers' reports, beginning with your own.
- Discussions and plans for future group activities.

This is not a required meeting format, and you may find that another structure works better for you and your group. Some groups like to include event reports from members who have attended an event since the last meeting, or include a "medieval moment". This is when a member shares some interesting information or research they've found about the Middle Ages in five minutes or less.

What if someone wants to make an announcement that is questionably appropriate to the meeting? You may have to decide on the spot whether the announcement should be made. Some guidelines to use are:

- How does the announcement relate to group business or activities?
- Is the topic something that will interest and apply to the entire group?

- Is the topic likely to set off an emotional debate that does not directly pertain to the activities of the group?

You, as the seneschal, can decide that the announcement may not be made during the meeting, but afterward as non-SCA business. In that way, you can avoid having it become part of the group's official business, and anyone who is not interested does not need to stay to avoid missing the rest of the meeting.

Unfortunately, you can never guarantee that a meeting will be completely successful even though it is easy and predictable to find and you have planned an agenda that covers all of the necessary information. You are working with people, after all. These techniques may give you some ideas, however, that you can tailor to your group to make the meetings as successful as possible.

Events

Perhaps one of the most important aspects of the Society is the event. An event is any official meeting of the Society including feasts, tournaments, and other activities representing recreation of the time period of 600-1600 A.D. This also includes demonstrations held to promote the Society.

Events are our main opportunity to showcase our skills and activities. But when it comes right down to it, events are a place to socialize and just have fun! Having fun, however, does take a little bit of planning. It would be impossible to list every possible thing that goes into planning and running an event. That is not the intent of this section of the Handbook. This section is intended to provide you with the basic rules of the game.

Published Events

A published event is one at which official SCA business may be conducted, the giving of awards by the Crown, official meetings of officers, etc. This is what most of us think of when we hear the word "event." The requirements for an event at which official SCA business may be conducted include the following:

- The event announcement must appear on the Kingdom Calendar in the Popular Chivalry, for at least the month of the event. In addition a flyer for the event must appear in Popular Chivalry for at least one month. A group is entitled to one month free flyer publication for their event in Popular Chivalry. If there is room, the Kingdom Chronicler will advertise further out. In cases where the event is at the beginning of the month, the event is entitled to two months of ad placement.
- A warranted officer of the SCA must be present at all times who is legally responsible. If it will not be possible for a warranted local officer to attend at all times, you need to arrange with a neighboring group for a warranted officer to be present. This officer must be sober for the duration of the event.

Guidelines for flyers to be published in Popular Chivalry are published in every issue. An event must be published in the Popular Chivalry in order to be considered "published." The Kingdom Chronicler has the right to reject a flyer for legitimate reasons.

Regardless of who designs and creates the flyer, you should check the flyer before it is submitted to make sure it includes those items required by Popular Chivalry. The event staff should also look it over to make sure their contact information and anything relative to their area of responsibility are listed correctly.

Another thing to remember is that the flyer for the newsletter may be seen by any number of people. It should be in reasonably good taste and not portray the SCA in a questionable light.

Non-Published Event

The Society Seneschal draws a distinction between published events and non-published events. A non-published event is any gathering that is covered by the SCA's insurance. To be covered by the insurance, a meeting, fighter practice, local revel, etc. must:

- Be open to any person who wishes to attend,
- Conform to SCA policies, and
- Be publicized by whatever means the group customarily uses to publicize such things—i.e., announcements at meetings, details printed on the web page, appearing in the local newsletter, etc.

If it is not open to anyone who wishes to attend, or if it is not related to group business, it is not covered by the SCA's insurance! This means that a birthday party, unless held in conjunction with a demo, tournament, potluck feast, or some such, is not a "covered" event; and an invitation-only fighter practice is not covered by SCA insurance.

Unofficial Events

Groups often hold local revels, potlucks, and mini-events that are primarily for the enjoyment of those living in the group. These don't need to (and should not) appear on the kingdom calendar. However, it is a very good idea to let the surrounding groups know when your group has a local revel scheduled! Invite them to attend, and try to attend their unofficial events if you can.

General Event Information

The best resources for event ideas and helpful hints are probably members of your very own group. If someone in your group has run an event previously, ask them lots of questions. Quiz your members as to activities that they think would be fun. Those old event reports in your seneschal's files can also be very helpful.

In the "olden days" it used to be possible to plan and hold an event with as little as 3–4 months of lead time. As a general rule this is just not possible to do anymore. If you can, try to begin planning your event about a year in advance. If you have a particularly great site that books up fast, you may want to reserve the site 18 months prior to the date of your event.

You need to contact the Kingdom Calendar Deputy at the time you begin planning your event. You may hold an event on the same weekend as another group as long as there is a distance of at least 200 miles between the two groups. Exceptions may be granted to any event restriction by contacting the Kingdom Calendar Deputy, but such exceptions are rare. Although your proposed event steward can contact the calendar deputy to see if a date is available, only seneschals can officially secure a date on the Kingdom Calendar.

Finding a site can be quite a challenge. Some areas have a lot of great places to choose from and others are very limited. It is helpful to have an idea of what you want to do at the event when you are trying to find a site. For example, an event featuring fighting as the main activity will have completely different needs than one featuring musical activities.

Once you find a site that is available and within your budget, you will need to meet with the site contact in person (a really good idea) to discuss your needs and find out all the rules and regulations of the site. If an event steward has already been chosen, that person can do all of this.

Ultimately, because it is your signature that will go on the site contract, you may want to make sure that you personally know all the pertinent information. Let's reiterate: the seneschal is the only person that is authorized by the Society to sign site contracts.

Some sites will request proof of liability insurance. Usually the Certificate of Proof of Insurance will do. This certificate is available on the Seneschal e-group. Sometimes a site will request a certificate naming the site owner, specifically, as an insured party. An event which plans to have equestrian activities requires the equestrian insurance certificate. There is a small fee for both of the certificates. The process to obtain an additionally insured certificate takes at least a month (And the fees are massive for expedited insurance certificates). Detailed information and forms on obtaining additionally-insured and equestrian insurance are provided on the Kingdom Seneschal's website.

All this preparation! As seneschal, it is strongly recommended for you to be present at the event. The event steward is, however, your deputy for the duration of the event, so it's okay if you're not able to attend. Remember that as a temporary officer of the Society, the event steward must be a member of the SCA. There must also be at least one warranted officer present at the event (event stewards themselves are not warranted).

The seneschal needs to provide the event steward with event rosters and waivers for use at gate. All of these forms can be found on the Kingdom Seneschal's website.

As soon after the event as possible, but no longer than 30 days after, all waivers should be sent to the Kingdom Waiver Deputy. Make sure they are clearly labeled with the event, place, and date.

After the event the event steward should complete a report. The report should include a synopsis of the day's activities. Who was in charge of the activities, i.e., marshal in charge, event steward, etc.? The report could also include an expense report. You can use this when you complete your quarterly report to the Kingdom Seneschal, which contains a section about events your group has held.

Demos

Demos are essentially mini-events. However, instead of focusing on providing entertainment for other members of the Society, the demo focuses on representing the SCA to the rest of the world. Demos generally fall into one of three categories, although some will overlap: public relations, educational, and recruiting.

IMPORTANT: Remember members of the general public may not participate in combat-related activities at a demo. If somebody is interested in SCA combat, tell them when fighter practices are held and invite them to attend the next one.

Public Relations Demo

The public relations demo often comes in the form of participation as an "act" in a parade, or some kind of civic function. It is best not to have activities that are too involved or take more than a 10-15 minute time commitment on the part of the observer. Activities such as painting a medieval bookmark, writing your name in calligraphy, or trying on a costume or armor work well.

Educational Demos

Educational demos are pretty self-explanatory. Generally educational demos are done for schools (elementary through high school). The school and/or teacher usually will let you know what they would like to see at the demo. Design your program to be entertaining to the appropriate age group. Try not to be boring and lecturing; remember our job is to make learning history fun and alive!

Recruiting Demos

The recruiting demo is the toughest demo to do. Once again, provide some fun and brief activities that people can have some hands-on interaction with the Society. It is also a good plan to provide some scheduled shows. One idea that works well is to alternate between fighting and fashion shows. That gives people a good idea that we have very diverse activities in the SCA.

Make sure that you have plenty of written materials for people to take home with them. Flyers should include general information about the SCA, your group, and who to contact if interested. Make sure these flyers are updated as information changes. You won't draw anyone new into the Society if they don't know how to find you! Some groups have also printed business cards with the local contact information on them. These are inexpensive and easy to grab, and if someone in particular has been talking to a potential recruit, they can also jot their own phone number on the back of the card.

General Demo Information

Depending on the scope of the demo, you may or may not need to have an event steward. Larger demos like Renaissance Fairs definitely need a steward, but a one-hour school demo does not. Many groups find it helpful to have an officer whose sole job is to act as a liaison for planning demos, sometimes the group's Chatelaine handles coordinating their demos. If there will be no steward at the demo, at least one of the participants must be a member of the Society.

No matter what type of demo you are having, remember that the idea is for both the SCA members and the guests to have a good time. If someone gets hurt, that will put a damper on things! Make sure that if there is fighting, you have an adequate number of marshals. We all know what is dangerous, but a spectator may not. Common sense suggests that activities involving fire and toxic chemicals should also be avoided.

Group Officers

Officer Guidelines

All groups except Baronies or Provinces are required by Corpora to have a seneschal, an exchequer, and one of the following: a herald, a marshal or a minister of arts and sciences. Other offices may be filled if the needs of the group so dictate. Baronies and Provinces are required to have all the above-listed offices plus a chronicler (a minimum total of 6 officers); it is strongly advised that Baronies also have a chatelaine. Those required officers have job descriptions elsewhere in this section.

The seneschal and exchequer cannot hold any other office within the group. In addition, a person should think very carefully about assuming more than one office. The time and energy required to do a job well is not inconsiderable.

Local officers are appointed by the Kingdom Great Officer and are warranted by the Crown, as is discussed elsewhere. The seneschal and current local officers usually have some input on the appointment of new officers.

In most groups, the seneschal acts as the administrative director of the group's activities. The seneschal will serve as a member of the Financial Committee, run meetings, and in general, oversee the other officers. This is not to say that the seneschal directs the activities of the officers—and micro-managing your fellow officers is a big no-no—but the seneschal should receive quarterly reports from the other officers and know what is going on within these offices. If officers fail to provide reports to the seneschal, a gentle reminder is usually sufficient to produce the needed report. If, however, that fails, the seneschal should contact the appropriate Kingdom Great Officer. If the officer in question is not reporting to the Kingdom, the seneschal is responsible for completing the missing report to the best of his/her ability.

Job Descriptions for Group Officers

Chatelaine

The Chatelaine's primary responsibility is the care and feeding of newcomers. Sometimes the Chatelaine also coordinates the group's demos, and/or maintains the group's phone list. But the recruiting and welcoming functions are paramount. For more information on the chatelaine's duties, as well as on recruitment and retention of new members, see the section on those subjects. There is a Chatelaine's report form; if your group has a chatelaine, that person should be reporting to you and to the Kingdom Chatelaine.

Chronicler

The chronicler reports to the Kingdom Chronicler and is responsible, directly or indirectly, for:

- Publishing the group's newsletter in accordance with SCA requirements.
- Filing, accurate, and timely reports to the Kingdom Chronicler and group seneschal.

Exchequer/Reeve

No matter what they're called in your group, the group Exchequer reports to the Kingdom Exchequer and is responsible for:

- Maintaining the group's financial records.
- Maintaining the group's double-signature bank account.
- Monitoring compliance with and enforcing financial policies set forth in Local Branch Financial Policy, Meridian Financial policy and the group's financial policies.
- Filing accurate and timely reports with the appropriate regional Exchequer and the group seneschal.
- Serving as a member of the group's Financial Committee.

Herald

The herald reports to the Beacon Herald and works with the Cypher Herald on submissions. The herald is responsible for:

- Furthering heraldic activities within the group by actively assisting group members with help, when requested, designing heraldic devices and names.
- Filing timely and accurate reports to the Beacon Herald and the group seneschal.
- Processing heraldic submission forms in a timely and accurate manner.
- Processing all financial transactions that arise from name and device submissions in a timely fashion.
- Keeping accurate records of office activities, including submission and financial matters in accordance with policies and procedures set in Meridian Financial Policy (pertaining to heraldic submissions).
- Performing any ceremonial duties as defined by the kingdom and local laws and customs.

Knight Marshall

The knight marshal reports to the Earl Marshal and is responsible for:

- Ensuring the safety of all martial activities and equipment, including armor, weapons, and archery equipment.
- Running fighter practices or arranging for the running of fighter practices under an authorized marshal and otherwise in accordance with the requirements set forth by the Earl Marshal.
- Compiling and maintaining records of the authorized fighters and archers in the group.
- Filing accurate and timely reports with the Earl Marshal or the regional deputy.
- Filing authorization paperwork on a timely basis.
- Collecting waivers at Fighter Practice (each fighter should provide his blue card or sign a waiver once a year).

Minister of Arts and Sciences

The minister of arts and sciences reports to the Kingdom and is responsible for:

- Furthering the practice of arts and sciences by assisting group members with finding resources for group or personal projects.
- Creating environments where the practice of arts and sciences is encouraged.
- Providing information to group members about arts and sciences activities throughout the kingdom.
- Filing accurate and timely reports on arts and sciences activities to the Kingdom Minister of Arts and Sciences and the group seneschal.

Minister of Children

The Minister of Children (MoC) is responsible for providing educational activities for children in the group, as well as for visiting children attending events the group hosts. The Ministry of Children can cover an age range from three to seventeen, depending on the needs of the group.

It is of paramount importance to stress that the MoC IS NOT a babysitter! Parents are not to “dump” their children on the MoC during meetings or events, and children who can’t handle themselves may be returned to their parents.

The MoC is likewise not responsible for the behavior of the group’s children during meetings; that is first, last, and always the responsibility of their parents or other adult who brought them. There is a MoC report form; if your group has a minister of children, that person should be reporting quarterly to you and to the Kingdom Minister of Children (KMoC).

The MoC is required to have a background check before taking office. Please see the section below on background checks.

Webminister

The webminister reports to the Kingdom Webminister and is responsible, directly or indirectly, for:

- Maintaining or arranging for maintenance of electronic communications such as web pages, if applicable.
- Publishing the group’s website in accordance with SCA requirements.
- Maintenance of web pages
- Filing, accurate, and timely reports to the Kingdom Webminister and group seneschal.

Other Officers

A group may have as many officers as they feel necessary. Essentially, all officers are volunteers and your group may be large enough to have someone in charge of the shire’s property, often called a Quartermaster or Gold Key (usually this is specific to loaner garb). You may also have enough folks to have RUM Provost or a full-time Demo Officer. Whatever works for your group and the members of your group is what you should do.

Background Checks

The SCA requires a mandatory background check for anyone in the SCA that serves in an official capacity involving children. This includes Ministers of Children, Youth Knight Marshals, and Youth Rapier Marshals. In addition, the Kingdom Seneschal is required to have a background check. The potential officer should contact their immediate superior and obtain from them the most recent background check forms. The background check is paid for by the SCA and the Kingdom, so there is no out of pocket costs associated with it.

Selecting a Suitable Replacement

Officer Transitions

Officer transitions can be smooth or rough. In an ideal world, the outgoing officer starts planning ahead early, makes a considered choice with input from the rest of the group as to who among the many eager candidates would best serve the group’s needs, obtains his/her superior officer’s approval for the recommendation, and then works with that person for three to six months in order to train the new officer to assume the duties of office so the business of the group continues with nary a hitch.

Officer Selection

The following is a list of some do's and don'ts for choosing an officer, and particularly for selecting a replacement for the office of seneschal.

- Experience—it is best if the person is not brand new to the Society and to the group. General SCA experience and a certain level of maturity will help someone to be effective in any office, particularly the seneschalate.
- “Musical officers”—If possible, it's generally best to get someone who hasn't held an office, or at least not one of the more time-consuming offices, just prior to taking the office. However, in small groups, “musical officers” is a way of life.
- Burnout—be careful that the new prospective officer won't enter office already burned out.
- Multiple officer households—as a general rule, the Kingdom Seneschal will not warrant someone who lives under the same roof or is closely related to the outgoing seneschal. This is because it's important that the group be served by a wide variety of people, with different viewpoints. Also, the office of seneschal is rarely an individual commitment, and if it lives in one house for too long, the inhabitants are apt to get heartily sick of it.

Qualities of Good Officers

While it is most unwise to devote time in an open meeting to discussing the pros and cons of individual applicants for an officer position, it is valuable to spend some time discussing, in the abstract, what qualities would make a person a good seneschal, or chronicler, or whatever the relevant office is.

This can lead to nominations of a sort; somebody might say, “I think Lord Fifflesnazz would be a really good seneschal.” If this statement is enthusiastically seconded by other members of the group, and Lord Fifflesnazz doesn't recoil in horror or run screaming from the room, you've got yourself a candidate. (You may have a candidate even if he did run screaming from the room, but that's called a “hard sell.”)

Opinions on Specific Applicants

If you have more than one applicant for a position, you can also invite people to share with you, privately, their opinions about which one would be best for the group. Be careful here—a person's “people skills” are certainly relevant, but you don't want to be dragged into listening to insults. If people share their opinions verbally, listen and don't openly argue with them, but don't let anyone get into personal attacks.

If someone tries to address something other than the person's ability to do the job, remind them that the topic at hand is their ability to hold an office and benefit the group. If it seems there's no help for it, suggest that the person write their opinion down and give it to you. Most people will hesitate to commit a personal attack to writing and give it to a third party.

Local Opposition to a Candidate

One of the things that might cause a kingdom officer to reject a recommended candidate, or at least take a good, hard look at things, is if that kingdom officer becomes aware that a substantial number of people in the local group oppose the appointment. A “substantial number” is one of those quantities that can't be clearly defined, but if more than one or two complaints are received, it's usually enough for the kingdom officer to look into the situation, at least particularly if the people objecting are known to be solid members of the group.

Also, if people are unhappy with the local officers, they are likely to expend less effort on helping the group, possibly even dropping out altogether. So, while the local group has no “official” role in choosing officers, their opinions cannot be discounted. Without the local populace, there is no group of which to be an officer.

The Final Say

The first important truth that you, and all the officers in your group, must understand is that the final say in any local officer selection (other than deputy officers) is the right of the relevant kingdom officer, in consultation with the Crown. The kingdom officer appoints the local officers. The Kingdom officer and the Crown warrants all officers. Although it appears that local officers appoint their successors (and in practice it does tend to work that way), the appropriate Kingdom Great Officer always has the final word.

Roles in Transition

Role of the Outgoing Officer

The outgoing officer is expected to recommend a replacement to the Kingdom Great Officer. In practice this recommendation will usually be accepted, since the local officer should know best the requirements of the job and who among the available people is best suited to do the job.

Only if there is some problem with the proposed new officer will the kingdom officer refuse to let that person assume the office. Examples of problems might include:

- Opposition from a number of people within the group.
- A poor prior performance in that particular office of which the kingdom officer is aware.
- The person does not meet the requirements of the office (for example, a branch Exchequer cannot live in the same house as the branch seneschal).

When No Recommendation is Forthcoming

While the outgoing officer is generally expected to make a recommendation, in cases where there are political factions vying for an office and the officer feels it would be best not to make a recommendation, or if the officer is honestly unable to decide between two candidates, it is possible to use the deciding vote of the kingdom officer to sidestep the situation. This is done by notifying the kingdom officer that you don't feel you can make the choice, and forwarding information about the candidates to him/her for a final decision.

In cases where many people are apt to be unhappy no matter what is done, this takes the heat off the local level and enables people to be annoyed at someone who is conveniently removed. If you are in a situation where you feel this is the best choice, it is wise to discuss it with the kingdom officer beforehand.

Role of the Seneschal

The local seneschal is NOT the “boss” of any of the other officers, except for deputies of the seneschal. This being the case, the seneschal does not have any more say in who assumes another office than anyone else.

However, your opinion may be solicited by a kingdom officer, particularly in the case of a difficult transition, and some kingdom officers may require that the seneschal write a letter of recommendation or sign a request that the new officer be warranted. This is usually done to ensure that the new officer does indeed have the support of the group. If you’re asked to do this, take the responsibility seriously; you are really being asked to speak for your group.

Role of the Other Officers

A wise officer who is faced with a choice of replacement candidates will consult with the other officers in the group. After all, they’ll be working closely with the new officer, and their opinions can be quite valuable, as they are frequently among the more experienced people currently active in the group.

Some groups hold closed officers’ meetings to discuss difficult turnover situations; and some groups submit a joint recommendation to the kingdom superior officer. Some kingdom officers may solicit the opinion of the other officers, particularly if the outgoing officer did not recommend a replacement. However, the officers don’t “choose” the new officer, any more than anyone else does at the local level.

Role of the Group’s Populace

It is often stated that the SCA is not a democracy. This means that your group should not be holding “elections” to choose officers. Nothing in the organization is done by majority vote, and local office choices are no exception. However, this does not mean that the local populace has no right to participate in officer selection.

Instead of being a “one-man, one-vote” democracy like the clubs we belonged to in high school, the SCA at the local level tries to run by consensus. Consensus means that pretty much everyone can live with the decision that is reached, even if it may not be their personal favorite option. If necessary, the populace may be polled to determine a consensus.

Stages of Being an Officer

Taking the office

Contact the Kingdom Officer

When the local group, or outgoing officer, has a new officer to recommend, the kingdom officer needs to be contacted. This should be done by both the outgoing and incoming officers. The outgoing officer should write to the kingdom officer to resign the office and name the recommended replacement.

The new officer should also write the kingdom officer to state his or her willingness to assume the office, and give a brief overview of SCA and relevant real-world experience, particularly if the kingdom officer does not know the person. It’s also a good idea to include a photocopy of your membership card at this time. All officers, at all levels, must be paid members of the SCA. This is required by Corpora and is not negotiable. In some cases a warrant will be issued by the Greater Kingdom Officer.

Receive the Files

New officers should also receive all the existing files for their office. Not receiving the files in a timely fashion is a frequent cause for complaint by new officers. As seneschal, try to make sure (in an unobtrusive way) that the files for an office are turned over to the new officer as soon as possible. In particular, copies of reports and correspondence pertaining to the office, as well as any pertinent handbooks provided by the kingdom officer or purchased with group funds, need to be turned over.

Training

Ideally, the new officer has a few months to train under the outgoing officer before assuming the position. This allows the outgoing officer to show them how to complete a quarterly report and to teach them most of the duties of the office. Of course, we all know this doesn't always happen. Sometimes a new officer comes into the position rather abruptly and with no training. In that case, the new officer will need to use the kingdom officer and the other officers of the group for guidance.

Term of Office

As a general rule, most officers are warranted for a two-year term. Most people are ready emotionally to be done with the office by that time. On occasion, warrants may be extended for a period of time if the officer appears reasonably "fresh," is still doing a good job, and the dynamics of the group do not warrant a change at that time. Failure to file required reports in a timely manner can cause an officer to be removed from office, as can other failures in duty. These might include but are not necessarily limited to:

- Constantly failing to attend meetings and other group functions.
- Not being available to the group to perform the duties of office (for example, nobody can connect with the Exchequer to get a check when needed, or the local herald does not provide submission forms when requested).
- Getting heavily involved in factional politics and disputes. Offices are not to be used to play political power games within a group.

Leaving Office

As noted above, a normal term of office is two years. But sometimes an officer will decide to step down from the position prior to completing the standard two-year term. This may be caused by a major life change, such as moving out of the group, illness, a change in family status, or a change in jobs that cuts into spare time. Or the person may simply decide that they no longer wish to hold the office. This is not necessarily a bad thing.

It is an officer's duty to arrange for the orderly transition of the office, insofar as possible. If something unexpected, such as a sudden move to other climes, comes up, do the best you can in the limited time you've got. You may need to contact the kingdom officer and arrange for a temporary replacement until someone can be found who wants to take office for a full term.

Burnout

Sometimes an officer will avoid giving up an office when it appears that it is time to do so to everyone except the officer in question. A burned-out officer often feels that no one is capable of doing the job except him or her. Usually the quality of the officer's work begins to deteriorate during this period. In addition, there is also a general lack of interest in starting projects or seeing them through.

The SCA is a hobby, and it's supposed to be fun. While holding an office does carry with it certain obligations, and not all of those obligations are going to be fun (few people, for example, look forward to the end of the quarter because they're thrilled to have an opportunity to write a quarterly report), in general the rewards should exceed the frustrations, and the parts of the job you enjoy should exceed the parts you don't. When this ceases to be the case it is time to leave office. In fact, it's better to leave while you're still enjoying the job. Usually if you're enjoying the job most of the time, you're being effective; and isn't it better to leave office while you're still effective, so the rest of the group is sorry to see you go, rather than relieved?

If you have pangs when you turn over the office, don't worry; that's natural. Particularly if you have put a great deal of yourself into the office and done it well, it's normal to identify closely with it and feel a little "lost" when you prepare to give it up. But give yourself a chance to try some other things you haven't done before, or haven't done in a while, both in and out of the SCA. Soon life will be full again and you'll find other projects to occupy your new-found spare time. And, not to worry, opportunities to hold local offices come around quite regularly in most groups, and it's relatively rare for there to be a large pool of applicants. Eventually, your number will come up again in the office lottery if you want it to, particularly if you're remembered as a good and effective officer by those in your group. It's in your interest as well as the organization's to leave office while you're still relatively "fresh" instead of when you're reduced to crisp cinders.

It is sometimes possible to "step back" from the office briefly, and return with new enthusiasm. This is particularly true if it's relatively early in your term, and a bothersome but solvable problem came up that occupied a lot of time and energy for a while. If something like this happens, you might consider couple of possible solutions. If you can arrange it, take a weekend "off" from the SCA—either go on an out-of-town pleasure trip that has nothing to do with the SCA, or just stay home and devote yourself to non-SCA pursuits—preferably while letting your answering machine deal with the phone. If this isn't possible, perhaps you can carve out one night a week when you don't do SCA business—then stick to it, religiously. Or if there's a particular aspect of the job you're really tired of, see if you can delegate that to another person for a time.

The burnout victim may not be you. Sometimes, as seneschal, you're the one to realize that a local officer is crispy. Some signs of burnout are noted above; others include failing to do routine duties, such as returning phone calls or doing minor paperwork (especially if the person has been fairly efficient in the past); finding fault with every proposed replacement; coming up with excuses not to turn the office over at a certain time; and lessened attendance at group functions. Beware the person who says they want to stay in office until they finish Project X, particularly if Project X is a large undertaking with no definite timetable.

If you suspect you're facing an officer who's burned out, try to talk to the officer about the problem in a friendly, non-threatening manner. Do this in private, and try not to put the other person on the defensive— although this can be difficult. It's best to start out by expressing general concern about the person; then work up to what you think is the specific cause of any problems. If you don't think you're on good enough terms with the officer to do this yourself, try to enlist a friend of his or hers to do it, or else a trusted neutral party. If necessary, discuss the problem with the Kingdom Seneschal or the person's superior officer, and get their advice on how to proceed.

If somebody approaches you and suggests that you may be burning out, pay attention to their words. They may not be right—sometimes a stressful but decidedly temporary problem, in or out of the SCA, will cause a person to act burned out when they really aren't. Also, sometimes it's possible to take a brief "step back" from the office and return with a fresh perspective. But do consider whether the burn-out monster is attacking you, and whether it might be time to look for a replacement or speed up your plans to turn over the office, keeping in mind that it's best to leave 'em wanting more.

Finally, a bit of personal philosophy: Sometimes personal or work life makes it impossible to continue to perform your duty as an officer. When this happens, it seems very difficult to give up the job. Please remember that there is nothing wrong with giving up your office early. It's better to do that than to continue to hold the office and not be able to do it well. It is all right for your personal life to supersede your hobby.
